

Indigenous Languages Grants Funding Guidelines

2026-27

DELIVERING FOR QUEENSLAND | Queensland Government

Introduction

Language is central to the identity, culture, and wellbeing of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, connecting them to family, community, and Country.

Language plays a vital role in maintaining cultural identity and strengthening the resilience of Queensland's Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities.

The Queensland Government Indigenous Languages Grants (ILG) program supports activities across Queensland to preserve, promote and revitalise traditional and contemporary Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages. It contributes to efforts under the National Agreement on Closing the Gap to ensure Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages are strong, supported and flourishing.

The ILG program provides funding for community-led initiatives to increase opportunities for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples to document, share, use and maintain language. Activities include language resource development, community language projects, documentation, recording, research through shared stories and other initiatives that support language preservation and revitalisation.

The ILG program is intended to support community-based language initiatives and does not provide funding for curriculum-based language education within schools. Applicants are encouraged to work closely with language owners, Elders, custodians and community members to ensure activities are culturally appropriate and support the protection of Indigenous Cultural and Intellectual Property (ICIP).

These Guidelines outline the funding available, eligibility requirements, assessment criteria, application process, funding conditions and reporting requirements for ILG 2026–27.

Objectives

The objective of the Indigenous Languages Grants is to increase the number and strength of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages spoken, documented, shared and maintained throughout Queensland by supporting community-led language preservation, revitalisation, documentation, resource development and intergenerational knowledge transfer activities.

Language initiatives may include:

- developing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander language resources, including digital technologies, publications and other culturally appropriate materials
- increasing community participation in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander language use, sharing and revitalisation activities
- celebrating and supporting the promotion of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages, knowledge and cultural heritage through language-focused arts, story-telling, cultural and community initiatives
- providing professional development, training, and capacity-building opportunities that support Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples to document, maintain, preserve and revitalise languages
- raising awareness about the importance of and benefits of speaking Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages
- researching, recording, documenting and reviving Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages, including through resources held in local, state and national collections and archives.

Applicants are encouraged to consider how their activity can be inclusive of Elders, young people and people with disability.

Funding available

- Grants of $20,000 (excluding GST) are available to support eligible Indigenous language initiatives.
- Total program funding of $200,000 (excluding GST) is available for distribution through the ILG program.
- Funding is provided directly to successful applicants through a competitive assessment process.
- Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander peoples must be actively involved in the design, development and delivery of the funded activity.
- Activities must be delivered in Queensland and completed within the timeframe specified in the funding agreement.

- The Queensland Government will seek to support a diverse range of language initiatives across the state, with an appropriate spread of funding committed outside South East Queensland, including in regional and remote communities.

Types of eligible events and activities

The list below provides examples of eligible activities. This list is not exhaustive. Applicants may submit other activities that meet the objectives of the grant program. For example:

- Develop language resources such as books, picture books, language applications, word lists, sound charts, dictionaries and grammar resources.
- Research, document, record and preserve Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages, including archival materials and historical collections.
- Record conversations, stories, oral histories and songs in language for future generations.
- Develop digital libraries and community-controlled repositories for the storage and preservation of language materials.
- Establish media libraries of cultural materials that support the production, preservation and promotion of language.
- Produce language-focused videos, podcasts, animations and other digital media resources.
- Produce resources or materials and deliver professional development, training, and capacity-building activities for those who work or want to work in Indigenous languages.
- Create visual recordings of welcomes in language and other cultural practices.
- Develop bilingual signage, communications and place-based resources that promote the visibility and use of language.
- Establish mentor programs that connect Language Owners and/or Elders with younger generations.
- Deliver workshops, yarning circles, study tours and other community activities that support language sharing and revitalisation.

Language ownership and cultural authority

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages are owned and maintained by the relevant language groups, communities, custodians and knowledge holders.

Applicants must demonstrate that appropriate consultation has occurred with relevant Language Owners, Elders, custodians and community representatives when developing and delivering the proposed activity.

Applicants should ensure their activity:

- considers and supports the principle of self-determination
- respects and protects Indigenous Cultural and Intellectual Property (ICIP)
- follows appropriate cultural protocols and permissions
- identifies the relevant Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander language and language code through the Austlang database, visit: AIATSIS AustLang Online
- demonstrates community support for the proposed activity.

Applicants are encouraged to consider Indigenous Cultural and Intellectual Property Protocol developed by the Queensland Department of Education when developing projects to support the respectful use and protection of language and cultural knowledge.

Applicants are required to provide letters of support from the relevant Language Owners and any key project partners as part of their application.
